Council considers natural gas

ANGELICA BLENICH

A new fuel source could be coming to the municipality of Dysart as council moves forward with a proposal to bring natural gas to the area.

Councillors heard a presentation from Joshua Samuel of Northeast Midstream at their May 25 meeting.

An Ontario-based firm specializing in liquefied natural gas, Northeast Midstream is proposing to bring natural gas by extracting it from a transmission pipeline, liquefying it, transporting it to the area and then storing it at a facility.

The president and CEO of the General Partner of Northeast Midstream LP, Samuel said this method is widely used in North America, as it minimizes or replaces lateral pipelines.

This makes it possible for areas like Dysart to have access to natural gas, as it costs too much to build a pipeline from an area like Lindsay, he said.

The provincial government has recently announced the $200-million Natural Gas Access Loan program and the Natural Gas Economic Development Grant to

Duchene strikes gold in Czech Republic

After the Canadian men's hockey team defeated the Russians 6-1 in the International Ice Hockey Federation World Championships final in the Czech Republic Haliburton's Matt Duchene found himself feeling like a kid again.

"It's always special and something you dream about as a kid. It's the perfect way to top off such a huge success. It always gives me chills. I'm so patriotic especially when it comes to hockey, there's no better feeling than hearing your anthem after those big games and there's no worse feeling than hearing someone else's. Fortunately, we only had to hear O Canada in this year's tournament," he emailed from Denver.

The team went undefeated at the tournament and dominated their opponents in 10 games, including the final. Duchene played strongly, finishing with 12 points (four goals and eight assists) in 10 games to finish fifth in scoring at the tournament.

Teljeur new Pinestone GM

Pinestone Resort and Conference Centre has a new general manager and a new executive chef.

John Teljeur, former director of sales for the Pinestone, took over on Monday, May 25. Simultaneously, Vrancor Group announced Emily Keller was being promoted to the top kitchen position. Vrancor Group owns and operates Pinestone and the company's director of operations told the Echo they were looking forward to the community connections and hotel experience Teljeur brings.

"We feel that we're a good part of the community and we need to embrace it and having a local person like John is key to success," said Tosh. Teljeur worked at Pinestone under the Delta management from 2002 to 2009.

Keller formerly worked at the Domain of Killien, coming to Pinestone in 2012. She was promoted to the position when the former executive chef left.

"With her vast culinary experience and deep understanding of the Pinestone guests' insatiable demand for delectable fare, I think even our most demanding guests will be in for a treat," Tosh said in a press release.

V&S changes course, plans to stay open

Shoppers can rejoice: V&S Haliburton is staying open. After months of hand-wringing following the announcement that the longtime downtown store would close in September, owner Andy Glecoff said he has found a way to stay open.

Andy said they had "made arrangements to continue operating for one more year."

He also announced that his son Clay and Clay's wife Amy will be taking over management of the store.

Since the closure announcement, made at the end of March, V&S has received "overwhelming support" from customers, Andy said.

Clay and Amy have been working at the store for the better part of the last two decades. Clay moved up to Haliburton with his family in October of 1995. Amy has been working at the business since 1997.

"It's exciting," said Amy. "For a while we thought we weren't going to be here."

The pair is in the process of considering changes to the store, hoping to find the right formula to keep V&S profitable. Clay said there would likely be tough decisions to make along the way, but that they are committed to making a go of it.

Local residents win in final Cash for Care lottery draws

ANGELICA BLENICH

Diane Thompson was “completely gob-smacked” when she got the call letting her know she was the winner of $15,000 in the Haliburton Highlands Health Services Foundation’s Cash for Care lottery.

Delivered by HHHSF chairman Peter Oyler, the news left Thompson a little shaky and at a loss for words.

“Oh my God, are you serious?” were the first words out of Thompson’s mouth when she was told of the news by phone. “Give me a minute to collect myself.”

A resident of Minden, Thompson took home the top cash prize on the final day of draws, held on May 22 at the Haliburton hospital.

The winner of the $1,000 prize was Greg Luck of Haliburton. Taking home $2,000 was Steve Castings Ltd of Scarborough and $5,000 was won by Jack and Lorraine Virgin of Haliburton.

Now in its third year, Cash for Care raises funds for the HHHSF, with this year’s proceeds going towards the Making Moments Matter Campaign for the new palliative care centre.

This year 77 per cent of tickets were sold, said HHHSF executive director Dale Walker.

“This lottery is a heck of a lot of work for our administrative staff,” said Oyler, thanking everyone for their ongoing support.

The new palliative wing is set to break ground this summer.

Library employs new event-planning strategy

CHAD INGRAM

Staff Reporter

The Haliburton County Public Library changed the way it planned events for 2015, co-ordinating with community groups in order to prevent overlapping of programming.

The library recently released its 2014 annual report.

“It was observed that many of the organizations offering March Break programming both for free and a fee were doing so on overlapping dates,” library CEO Bessie Sullivan wrote in the report. “This was creating unnecessary competition and less choice for people in the Haliburton Highlands.”

Last fall, the library contacted organizations including The Art Hive, Abbey Gardens, Rails End Gallery, the Haliburton Forest and Wild Life Reserve, the Haliburton Highlands Museum, the Minden Hills Cultural Centre, and Municipality of Dysart et al to ensure that in 2015 there was programming throughout the week of March Break and that the county’s free programming was not competing with programs trying to recoup costs.

“This did involve some long range planning and the participation of all organizations to create the schedule,” Sullivan wrote.

Circulation grew by two per cent in 2014, from 144,925 items to 147,649. The library added more than 7,200 items to its catalogue, bringing total holdings to more than 50,000 items.

The library has eight branches throughout the county.

Continuing to partner with community organizations – the library has more than 50 strategic partnerships – a highlight of 2014 was work with the Ontario Early Years Centre, which helped provide various programming including a family literacy day, Baby Share a Book, Reading and Parent Program and Two Week Trip on a Reading Rocket Ship.

“Community partnerships continue to be an excellent way to provide quality programming while investing limited staff time and resources,” the report reads.

Another highlight of 2014 was the opening of the new branch in Wilberforce, a creation of Fleming College’s sustainable building design and construction program.

Library staff were busy, with Sullivan presenting a session called 50 Ways to Run a Library on a Shoestring at the Ontario Library Association’s Super Conference.

Sullivan and branch services librarian Erin Kernohan-Berning presented Using Local Media to Promote Your Library Collection at the University of Western Ontario.

Both Sullivan and Kernohan-Berning made presentations at a number of other conferences as well and as co-chair of the Ontario Library Association’s advocacy committee, Sullivan was part of a delegation of library leaders who met with MPPs and ministers at Queen’s Park, emphasizing libraries’ link to community-building and economic development.

M&M Meat Shops closes its doors

ANGELICA BLENICH

After a decade in the community, the Haliburton location of M&M Meat Shops said goodbye to its last customer on Saturday, May 23.

The store, located in the Beer Store plaza on County Road 21, was closed by the corporation, said Anita Martin, director of training and operational excellence for M&M Meat Shops.

The decision was based on both timing and a lack of interest in the franchise opportunity, said Martin.

“Our lease is ending,” she said. “This store currently is a company-run store, so we don’t have a franchisee on location. That’s truly our business model and since the lease is ending and we don’t have a franchisee we’ve made the decision to leave the market.”

Martin said the store has been without a franchisee for a few years and she is sad to see the company close a location in cottage country.

“We do really enjoy being in a cottage country type atmosphere,” she said. “It typically really does do quite well for us.”

Martin said the company hasn’t ruled out the possibility of opening up another nearby location in the future.

“We’re sad to leave the location,” she said. “We love the customers, the staff is fantastic. We really hope the best for them.”

expand natural gas service, said Samuel, which is one of the reasons the company is interested in proceeding with a proposal.

"That's not a lot of money, but it's a start," he said.

The funds are time sensitive, meaning the company would need to move quickly to get approvals, said Samuel.

"There's no reason Dysart shouldn't have natural gas," he said. "Delivering gas to Dysart is no different than delivering it to anywhere else."

The liquefied natural gas would be trucked up and then stored at a distribution centre, to be set-up by the company. Samuel compared the look of the distribution centre to a propane facility.

The method is safe and secure and compliant with CSA, according to Samuel.

Aside from Dysart, the company is investigating other communities for natural gas and are looking at a number of applications.

Samuel said while other fuel sources are going up in price, natural gas would offer potential savings on energy bills for area residents and commercial businesses.

He told councillors that households could expect to see an annual savings of $1,000 to $3,000 a year.

The company has received expressions of interest from several communities, including Dysart, said Samuel.

In order to move forward, the company would need to start phase two by July, to work within the provincial funding program time frame, and was asking Dysart council to sign a precedent agreement to allow Northeast Midstream to do a feasibility assessment.

The agreement would not bind the municipality to the project, as conditions would include getting approvals and funding, said Samuel.

The project can be terminated if conditions are not met, he said. Once the contract has been signed the municipality will be kept in the loop.

"This has a lot of outs ... we're prepared to work with you," he said. "There's not many people lining up to offer you natural gas."

Samuel said the company still has to walk through the town to get familiar with the community.

Deputy-reeve Andrea Roberts asked how much land was required for the storage facility, as there was not much available.

"We need a few acres," said Samuel. "We don't have a size of storage in mind yet."

Reeve Murray Fearrey said he could think of a few places off the top of his head.

The reeve asked if there would be a benefit to the company if both Dysart and Minden Hills went forward with a proposal together, to which Samuel said yes.

"If one of us didn't want to do it, would it jeopardize the project?" asked Fearrey.

"It could," said Samuel.

Natural gas would be an optional fuel source for residents and would not be mandatory, said Samuel.

"I think it would be crazy not to go ahead with this," said the reeve.

Councillors agreed to proceed with a proposal from Northeast Midstream.

Improvements planned for skateboard park

ANGELICA BLENICH

Staff Reporter

The following are brief reports of items discussed at an May 25 meeting of Dysart et al council.

The popular skate park in Head Lake Park could get even more popular amongst youth as council plans to make some changes to the facility.

Following a presentation from Pasi Posti about what the current skateboard park offers and how it can be enhanced, council decided to move forward with changes.

A new resident to the area, Posti started by telling council about why the skate park is exciting for him and his family.

With a career that includes working for popular skate company West 49 as a video producer, Posti said it's great that Haliburton Village offers something for the skateboarding community.

"Kids there love the space. They just want to see it improved," he said.

Posti said many small communities in Ontario offer a skate park for local youth. He told council he has heard of up to 30 skateboarders using the local skate park at any given time.

Posti said the municipality didn't need to do a complete overhaul of the park, but could instead improve it by just adding a few features.

Posti suggested organizing a fundraiser for the park improvements by selling skate decks, which he could get from a contact in Quebec at a reduced rate.

Retailing for $80 to $90 in stores, skate decks could be sold for $40 to $50 by the municipality, said Posti.

While Posti estimates a brand new park would cost $375,000 or more, Dysart could improve their park at a cost of $50,000 to $75,000.

Councillors agreed to move forward with investigating improvements through the municipality's recreation committee.

Council applies for infrastructure grant

The municipality is applying for funding to make improvements to Rotary Park through the Canada 150 Community Infrastructure Program.

If successful, the improvements would include resurfacing the tennis courts, enhancing trail lighting and improving the beach area, including nuisance goose prevention measures.

The grant was announced on May 15 and provides 33 to 50 per cent funding for eligible projects for up to $1 million.

"The funding is available for rehabilitation, renovation and expansion of existing community infrastructure assets that are open to the public and where the project takes place between April 2016 and March 2018," read chief administrative officer Tamara Wilbee's report to council. Total costs for the project are estimated at $100,000, according to Wilbee.

Colourfest co-ordinator announced

A new face will be seen at the helm of the popular fall festival organized by the Haliburton Business Improvement Area.

Moose FM's Autumn Smith has been hired to fill the position of Colourfest co-ordinator, stepping into the role previously held by Gail Stelter.

Colourfest takes place in Haliburton Village in October.

THE VOICE OF THE HALIBURTON HIGHLANDS

Echo wins seven provincial newspaper awards

The Haliburton County Echo and sister paper Minden Times were honoured with several Better Newspaper Competition awards on Friday evening.

At a gala dinner in Toronto hosted by the Ontario Community Newspaper Association, the Echo was presented with first place for Best Creative Ad, Best Feature Photo and Best Arts and Entertainment story.

The Best Creative Ad was awarded for a piece featuring shoes arranged as flowers to celebrate the summer. "This one caught my attention! A real fun ad design," the category's judge wrote.

"Darren Lum's technical skill here is extraordinary with the lighting making this photo a striking shot," the category's judge wrote.

A piece on art and mental health by Jenn Watt took first in the Arts and Entertainment category. "A really lovely read by Jenn Watt. A great narrative lead is followed by thoughtful writing and great depth of research. It's inspiring to read about the therapeutic benefits artistic creation is having on these community members," the judge in that category wrote.

The Echo placed second in the general excellence competition for its circulation category, as did the Minden Times.

"This paper got our attention with its abundance of community news," the judges wrote about the Echo. "The County Echo does an excellent job covering the communities in and around Haliburton. ... The stories are well-written and obviously this newspaper is an echo of the community... The Echo is filled with numerous effective ads that are well-designed and attractive... An all-around great newspaper."

The Echo placed third for Best Feature Series (about local food in Haliburton County) and Best Education Story (about teacher Reuben Maughan and the Virtual Learning Centre) and second for Best Sports Section.

The judge for the sports section category praised "dynamic writing" and "crisp and action-packed photos" in an attractive package.

Echo and Times columnist Steve Galea took home the Humour Columnist of the Year award. The judge in that category said the columns provided "out loud laughs" and "excellent wordsmithing."

Minden Times reporter Chad Ingram won second place for his editorial "Bird is the Word" in the under 9,999 circulation category.

Global resources

WE SPEND a great deal of time debating issues in our community; the Haliburton Highlands is an incredibly engaged, passionate place.

We regularly have conversations about life here – what we want, what we have and how much we’re willing to pay for it all.

But we also need to take time to talk about our role in the larger world.

Students at school tend to hear about it more, with their teachers playing the crucial role of connecting young people to global issues, teaching compassion and empathy for others through their lesson plans and extracurriculars.

For the rest of us, it comes from being out and about, attending documentary screenings, meeting world travellers, reading books and magazines, etc.

For me, it happened most recently while engaging in the most passive of pastimes: watching TV. I tuned into HBO’s Vice program last week because it promised a glimpse into India’s water crisis.

As a member of the Help A Village Effort board, which fundraises to put wells and toilets in India, I was curious to see what life is like for people in the world’s second most populous country (at a whopping 1.2 billion people).

The images were jarring. Actually, they were beyond jarring. I felt sick. In 15 minutes, journalist Tania Rashid took me deep into issue. Not only is water running out in India, it is rapidly being polluted by a crush of people. Eighty per cent of sewage in that country goes untreated into the water supply. The lack of sanitation leads to illness and death for people who are born into a situation beyond their control.

And in case that doesn’t seem like a problem for us here in the Highlands, when water starts to run out in one part of the world, it only puts pressure on the rest of us, not to mention the environment and wild-life.

I came away feeling a peculiar mix of despondence and gratitude. I looked out the window at the trees waving in the clean air, at my home complete with septic system and clean drinking water and felt helpless and stupidly lucky.

For no particular reason, most of us here in the Highlands were born in a land of abundance. Our issues locally are pressing, but so too are those around the world.

As empathetic, compassionate citizens, we need to help how we can, as we are able.

We are members of the Highlands community, but we are also citizens of the world. Our actions matter not just to our neighbours, but to those we may never meet.

Spring Marsh

Younger next year

“SERENITY COMES to the self propelled.” A friend said that to our group of women at one point during our hike on the Bruce Trail this past weekend. We were hiking a 16 kilometre section in the Beaver Valley and it was a perfect spring day. It was 20 degrees, and a soft wind was blowing so the bugs weren’t bad. The sky was a perfect blue. The six of us longtime friends were on a weekend getaway that we affectionately call chickfest. We’ve had many chickfests over our 25 years of friendship and the weekends have taken place in different settings – some have been urban, others in provincial parks when we have camped and this year a friend loaned us a cottage by Flesher-ton. Our weekends are always a unique blend of activities and have included biking, hiking, paddling, finding good cafes, cooking really good food together, having lots of conversations, laughing a lot, reading and relaxing.

The hike we did this year along the Bruce Trail took us through beautiful hardwood forests and across fields of long grass blowing in the wind. We hiked up ski hills. We saw many beautiful views of the Beaver Valley and the farm land. We found lots of spring flowers in bloom including an orchid. There were butterflies around us and birds were singing. We walked through apple trees in blossom and they smelled divine. It was the perfect day. We were lucky that all the conditions conspired. That doesn’t always happen.

At the end of the hike we came home to beer o’clock. We drank beer, ate chips and told stories of our day and remembered the many beautiful moments. We all did a little yoga to stretch out our hips, hamstrings and lower backs. And then we prepared another amazing meal and enjoyed our well deserved glass of wine! You can bet that we all slept really well after our hike.

I believe that one of the secrets to good life is having a body that is strong enough to go on these kind of adventures, and to have friends to go with. One of the women on chickfest brought a book with her called Younger Next

Year for Women (there is a version for men as well) and it is written by Dr. Henry Lodge and Chris Crowley. It talks about what women need to do once they reach the age of 50 to grow younger as they age. The authors suggest that all women need three things to age well: cardiovascular exercise, strength training and social connections (people to go out and be active with). The authors recommend that women must signal to their bodies to keep growing by exercising six days a week (for 45 minutes) or our bodies will go downhill. In the opening forward Gail Sheehy says that “exercise provides the signal that jolts our cells into repairing and renewing themselves and releases the chemicals that bathe the brains in positive feelings.” The message in this book is that exercising is our job and is as important as any medicine we are taking or any other task we take on in our day.

I am grateful to all my girlfriends for these amazing adventures. I promise I will keep exercising so I can stay strong enough to keep going with you!

Where it's hat

THERE ARE CERTAIN combinations that just should not be together. Whenever I go to a grocery store and see the words "toilet paper blowout sale" on a sign, I think this. The other combination that is questionable is that of a short man and fedora.

I discovered this last week when I tried one on.

It's not that a fedora doesn't admirably cover up a bald spot, which, if we are to be honest, is the only reason why any middle-aged man wears a hat in the first place. A fedora hides bald patches and thinning hair wonderfully.

The problem is every time I try one on, it makes me look as if I should be tap dancing beside a cartoon mouse who is taller than me. I don't know why this is but, suffice it to say, it is not a good look for me.

Yet I have come to realize that I am at an age and height when hat usage would probably be beneficial.

The problem is so many hats are not suitable for a person my height. A busby or top hat, for instance, would merely give the impression that I was just trying to look taller – especially when combined with heels.

And when you are my height and wear a wide brimmed hat such as a sombrero people are always asking how the coffee bean harvest is coming along. As you can imagine, this gets old after a while.

I could probably get away with wearing a beret. They are practically tailor-made for short people. The problem with a beret is that your facial hair dictates the first impression you present.

If you have a pencil moustache you look like an artist. If you have any more facial hair than that, you appear to be a revolutionary. Anywhere in between and people just think you are French.

All good looks, if that's what you want. Unfortunately, I don't.

I want a hat that covers my bald spot but doesn't draw too much unwanted attention.

The Viking helmet immediately comes to mind.

Right now many of you are probably thinking that's ridiculous, but hear me out.

First off, I'm not talking about a horned Viking helmet. I don't attend enough for formal events to make the purchase of one worthwhile.

No, I'm referring to the run of the mill Viking helmets – you know, the ones with the metal cap and nose guard.

There are plenty of practical arguments for wearing these too.

First off, they make you look taller without it being obvious. Second, they have a nose guard, something no other hat has.

Next, I can't think of anyone else around here who wears one, so a Viking helmet would at least be original. Whenever anyone asked about the guy with the Viking helmet, people would immediately know who they were talking about – and that's a good thing.

Better still, there's something inherently safe about wearing a metal cap that can deflect a blow from a broad sword, especially if you fly fish as much I do. Another cool thing about the Viking helmet is that it actually goes better with the unkempt, unshaven look that I prefer on most days. And I suspect the person at the return counter of any store would probably deal with you immediately and fairly if you were wearing one.

And I defy you to name me one other hat you can drink ale out of. Certainly not a fedora.

With all these things going for it, you have to wonder why the Viking helmet isn't one of those hats that's more commonly seen in our area.

I can only suspect that it's because people think they are pricey.

News flash! They're actually not that bad. The last one I looked at on the Internet was selling for $94.50 US – and it had horns!

Which is why I'm seriously considering the purchase.

Heck, what choice do I have? I'd look strange in a fedora.

Less garbage collected at annual road clean-up

To the Editor,

We had a wonderful turn-out for the Miskwabi Area Community Association annual road clean-up on Sunday, May 17.

We had over 45 participants that ranged in age from grandparents to grandkids and everything in between.

The bugs weren't too bad and many of the comments that were made when the participants got back from an hours work was that there didn't seem to be as much garbage this year and there was lots of discussion as to why.

We hope that the information in our newsletter has made people aware of their responsibility to keep the area looking attractive as well as the information that is contained in our lake plan.

There was also a question as to whether the work that was done last year by Dysart et al employees cutting back growth on the road sides and the visibility from that made people think twice about recklessly tossing garbage.

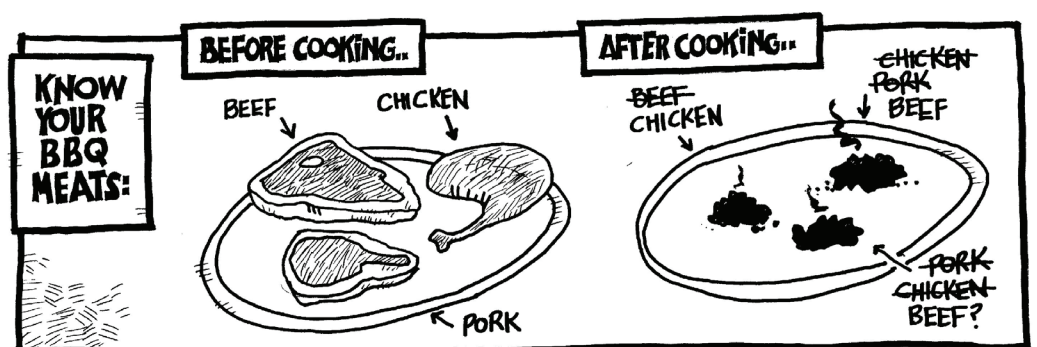

Whatever the reason, we are very pleased with the result of our work on Sunday!

When the clean up was completed we got together for a barbecue and had a chance to catch up with summer friends and start the summer season off to a great start!

Supporting the Davis family

To the Editor,

We would like to send a huge thank you to the friends and family of Steve, Marianne, Jacob and Moss Davis.

As some of you know, Steve suffered a stroke to his spine, and is currently working hard in the Toronto Rehab Centre.

They have definitely felt the love and generosity of their small community in the way of donations, cards, gifts, meals, prayers and well wishes, and for this we thank you on their behalf.

As we still do not know what's ahead for Steve, whether they will have to modify the house, buy a wheelchair, ramps, etc., any donations would be so very appreciated!

There is a trust fund set up at the TD Bank in Minden, or if you prefer to send email transfer: sungraphicsmh@gmail.com.

Driver arrested at RIDE check

On May 22 at 8 p.m. members from the Haliburton Highlands Detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police conducted a RIDE (Reduce Impaired Driving Everywhere) check on Loop Road at Dark Lake Road in the Township of Highlands East.

As the vehicle entered the RIDE check, officers discovered the driver had been consuming alcohol and he subsequently failed a roadside screening device test.

As a result a 65-year-old man from Highlands East was arrested and charged with operating a motor vehicle with over 80 mgs of alcohol and having open liquor in his vehicle.

He was issued a 90 day driver's licence suspension and his vehicle was impounded for seven days.

He will appear in Ontario Court of Justice in Minden on July 8.

Creating an inspiring legacy

DARREN LUM

Staff Reporter

Morgan Burke lights up at the prospect of the totem pole she designed still being at J.Douglas Hodgson Elementary School long after she has graduated and left the Haliburton school.

With golden hair hanging across one eye, the Grade 7 student is proud of how she helped to design a First Nations inspired totem pole made from an old telephone pole that now stands directly in front of the school library's main doors in Haliburton.

"It was an honour, I guess you could say, to be a part of ... something that will be in the school for a very long time," she said.

The research was conducted by her peers Storm Brannigan, Shelby Morrison and Ashley Zahn. They offered suggestions and details they wanted to see in the totem pole that measures close to six feet high and includes six animal heads, representing six different species indigenous to the area and character traits.

At the top is the owl, representing a teacher, as it possesses clarity in the darkness, is wise and looks over the others, followed by the moose, representing pride, life and strength (it teaches how to honour ourselves and to reward ourselves when we have worked hard, then the raccoon, representing curiosity and exploration, then the rabbit, representing hope and new opportunities and second from the bottom is the bear, representing strength and fearlessness and at the bottom, a wolf, the pathfinder, is inside the tree trunk as the foundation for the pole.

Although the rabbit was originally a fox (changed due to complications with the nose) in the design stage, Morgan was satisfied with the finished product and found the experience exciting and fun. So much so she is moving past just drawing. This summer the Grade 7 student is taking a woodworking course, learning how to use a chisel and a chainsaw.

"It has inspired me to create my own things," she said.

Among the challenges she faced included deciding on certain ideas for the animals.

The moose in particular posed a problem for the talented student, who couldn't settle on one idea of how it should look. She ended up drawing several examples.

The design was then carved by artist Andrew Munro, who not only visited the class at the start of the project, but also when he delivered the finished totem during March.

His message was that students need to find their passion in life.

This isn't Morgan's first display of art at the school.

Earlier in the year, Morgan created a display board for Remembrance Day.

Librarian, teacher and the special education Resource Teacher, Stephanie Schweitzer said the most important lesson in all of this was to look past the negatives and see the positive and to understand that perfection was not the ultimate goal.

She said she chose Morgan because of her obvious artistic skills, but also her attitude and co-operative nature.

This initiative had far reaching benefits that went beyond those that were involved directly with the totem pole, as it is part of making the library a greater place for everyone.

"I found it to be an exciting and enriching activity. The library was a very beige space and when I came to the school in September students articulated to me that they would like some colour and diversity. That was the impetus to get started to try and do something of change and the project continues," she said.

In the autumn, Schweitzer's class initiated the fund-raising efforts with a letter writing campaign to Crayola Canada.

All of the students wrote letters requesting items from the school and children's supplies company. The class chose the best two and submitted them. As a result, the school received a variety of supplies and put them up for a school penny raffle that financed the cost of the totem pole.

The idea for this project came from the principal Andrea Borysiuk and Schweitzer at the start of the year.

Schweitzer motions to the wall of the library and said it offered an opportunity to excite and engage students by making greater use of what is arguably the largest and brightest class room in the school.

Right now there are several inspirational wall decal quotes all around, large photos depicting local scenes and wildlife, a chalk wall and a wall space for art called, Jagu-Art – the last two made by the neighbouring high school students from Haliburton Highlands Secondary School.

The next project for the library is to dedicate a wall to the first nations people. She hopes that local artists can offer some help with this initiative.

The motivation for all of these efforts to improve the library is to showcase the beauty that surrounds the school inside.

"I wanted to bring in some of the natural world from outside because the school is situated in a gorgeous area," she said.

She wants to inspire students and make them appreciate and care about the library.

The library, she said, is multi-faceted facility that can offer more than just technology and research, as it can be a place for inspiration, joy and pride for all the students.

"That's what these walls are for. So, we can be welcoming and give them a space for their voice, whether it's through chalking on the chalk wall or drawing something and having it added to the Jagu-Art wall," she said.

Rare discovery in local leek moth project

ANGELICA BLENICH

Staff Reporter

At first Emma Horrigan didn't realize what she had stumbled upon.

The director of U-Links Centre for Community-Based Research, Horrigan has been involved with a local leek moth project for the past three years, in partnership with the Haliburton County Garlic Growers Association, Haliburton County Farmers' Market Association, Agricultural Adaptation Council and Haliburton County Development Corporation.

The purpose of the project is to study leek moths by trapping them using various methods, one being with a sticky liner, during the garlic growing season, as they are destructive to the crop which grows well in Haliburton County.

"We've been collecting those sticky liners and counting the number of leek moths," said Horrigan. "At the end of every season we actually take all those liners and actually submit them to a taxonomist at Agriculture and Agri-Food Canada."

The department has been working with Horrigan on the project, to learn more about the leek moth species in this area of the province.

Within the department works a world expert on micro-moths, Dr. Jean-Francois Landry. It was during one of the routine trap submissions that Landry confirmed Horrigan had submitted an interesting find.

"This project has had a few exciting findings that have been unrelated to garlic," she said. "Last year we identified a native species of acrolepiopsis, which is also called the carrying flower moth."

While a leek moth is an invasive alien species, the new discovery is a native species that lives in the area naturally, said Horrigan.

"What was exciting about the fact that we found it at our wild leek sites is it's the most northern record of the species ever recorded," she said.

The U-links director said when the project first started they were advised they would likely not see any carrying flower moth, however that turned out not to be the case.

The native species was discovered in 2013, which has brought out a new interesting perspective to local ecology. However more discoveries were in store for the project.

"Recently, last fall when I went to Ottawa to submit the liners we then got a call after saying they had identified another species of acrolepiopsis which is not one they had previously known to exist at all ... they know it's in the acrolepiopsis genus but there's no species name. On paper we've potentially discovered a new species of this genus."

Horrigan said Landry is scheduling a trip to the area sometime this summer to visit the leek moth sites and look for signs of where this insect might be living and what it could be feeding on.

"The interesting thing is we didn't just find it at one of our wild leek sites, we found it across all four," she said.

Horrigan submitted the latest traps in the fall of 2014 and was called this past March about the new find.

"My first question was is this common and what are the implications for the project?" she said.

The new species does not affect the project as they do not actually feed on garlic, said Horrigan.

"So it's not a threat to garlic crops," she said.

The discovery does bring up a lot of questions though. One Horrigan is hoping will be answered in the next few months.

"We really know nothing about it. So from an ecology perspective it's exciting," she said. "They are hoping to come and look at each of these sites in better detail and get an understanding of what's going on."

This is the last year of data collection for the project, with 2016 focused on preparing the final report, said Horrigan.

"We're also planning a formal workshop at the end of the project for the public as an opportunity to share our findings," she said.

An ongoing Leek Moth Project has pheromone traps, like this one, set up in wild leek patches across Haliburton County. U-Links director Emma Horrigan was at the helm of a major discovery while overseeing this research project, which is being supported by the Haliburton County Garlic Growers Association, Haliburton County Farmers' Market Association, Agricultural Adaptation Council (Growing Forward 2 program), and Haliburton County Development Corporation. Photo submitted

When Horrigan embarked on this project she never anticipated the twists and turns it would bring.

"I think it's just a really great example of how research can lead you down different paths," she said. "Research is really exciting in that way. You answer questions and then you develop new questions. I certainly did not expect that we would be finding a new species or be the first place to have a northern record of this native carrying flower moth. It's just been a really exciting project for those new findings. I think it's a really great example of the strength of collaboration."

Blustery opening day for Haliburton County Farmers' Market

ELIZABETH BATE

Staff Reporter

Brenda Acero spent part of the afternoon on May 19 trying to keep her tent from blowing away.

Acero is a vendor at the Haliburton farmers' market which opened with winds gusting up to 39 kilometres per hour, according to Environment Canada.

Holding down her tent and laughing while her husband and daughter served authentic Mexican food to customers, Acero said she was just glad it wasn't raining.

This is her second year participating in the weekly market in Head Lake Park that last year saw many rainy Tuesdays.

Just an hour into the first market the 25 vendors present were reporting good sales despite the chill in the air.

As the season continues, market manager Marla Force says the market will host 40 vendors including some new food and produce stands, as well as old favourites such as Sybil's and D&D Meats.

Force said she is pleased to see new, young farmers out this year because it helps to support local growers and promotes the local food movement.

"It's very popular, it's happening all over North America," she said. "People want to meet the people who grew their food and talk to them."

Local food and locally sourced ingredients are important to the vendors selling prepared food as well.

Acero and her husband Carlos get their Mexican spices from Kensington Market in Toronto, an area known for its Mexican cuisine, and source all their meat and produce from this area.

Acero believes it's important to support farmers and even other food vendors in her community. She is pleased to see a large variety of food vendors at this year's market, including the addition of two wood fired pizza booths.

"Every food vendor that comes in adds to it. It's not a competition," she said.

As part of Come to Town Tuesdays, an initiative to encourage those living outside the county to boost the local economy by spending more time here, Force hopes the market's variety of local food and products will be a draw for cottagers this year.

"You're supporting your neighbours who are trying to make a living out of growing food and you're supporting the local food movement," she said. "You're getting healthy food, organic food that doesn't have a lot of preservatives and it's a fun environment."

In addition to supporting farmers and food providers, the market showcases local artisans.

A regular at the Bobcaygeon market, Bethany Ballantyne and her husband Jeff are new to the Haliburton market, selling wooden spoons and bowls that Jeff carves by hand.

The new parents brought son Callum, eight months old, to their first day. "It's been amazing," Ballantyne said of the response they've been receiving.

"We had friends that told us Haliburton was awesome," she said, adding that the market was living up to its reputation despite the wind. "I'll take this over winter any day."

The market will run every Tuesday until Oct. 6 from 12 p.m. to 4 p.m. and repeat customers can take advantage of a customer loyalty card which gives visitors market dollars after 10 visits. "It's a great place to get your lunch," said Force.

In addition to the Head Lake location there are two other locations to visit the Haliburton market.

The Carnarvon location is open Fridays from 12 p.m. to 4 p.m. and new this year is a Minden market on Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

That market will run from June 20 until the end of August as a pilot project to gauge interest.

Jennifer Hill, left, serves up a cheese torte to Elaine Bell at the first Haliburton Market on May 19. The tortes are a new addition this year. ELIZABETH BATE Staff do it without the local curling club, which has been hosting the show since 1993 and makes up the entirely volunteer staff.

The best part of the weekend for Hussey is "seeing the smiles on everyone's faces and hearing all the compliments the curling club receives."

In addition to providing the venue, the club's restaurant and bar will be open during the show, so guests can relax and have a nice lunch or a beer while talking docks, decks, gardens, or hot tubs.

Hussey said vendor spots fill up fast, so those still looking for a spot in next weekend's show may be out of luck unless there is a last minute cancellation. The show allows vendors to retain their booths from year to year, so patrons looking for a favourite dealer need only go to the spot they found them last year.

Hussey says there is plenty of free parking, but last year's show had 2500 visitors, so guests may want to show up early to get a good spot. In addition to some great home advice you might just run into some familiar faces among the crowds.

"It's certainly a great opportunity to meet neighbours and friends and make some new acquaintances," Hussey said.

Tickets are $3 and doors open at 4 p.m. on Friday and 10 a.m. on Saturday and Sunday.

There were close to 100 Haliburton Dance Academy dancers in the 19th annual showcase show Seasons on Thursday, May 21 at the Northern Lights Performing Arts Pavilion in Haliburton. The sold out show included dancers from 18 months to senior ages. There were three shows from Friday to Saturday at the Northern Lights Performing Arts Pavilion to end the regular season of HDA programming. It resumes in September and will include Minden classes. /DARREN LUM Staff

Duchene acknowledges how amazing his career has been

He is excited and looks forward to coming home to Haliburton the first week of June to see his family, friends and spend time on the water.

Although this is Duchene's first world championship gold and the country's first world title since 2007, a lot of the attention has been on the actions of the opposition, as the Russian hockey team left the ice before the conclusion of the Canadian anthem during the medal and trophy ceremony.

Duchene, who has played on three other world championship teams, coming on the short end in two games to the Russians, called it a "bit classless."

"Like I said earlier, I have had to hear other teams' anthems many times, including the Russians' twice in the world championships after they eliminated us from the tourney. We hated every second of listening to it but we stayed. There's no way we would have left the ice before hearing the Russian anthem had they beaten us," he said.

There has been public condemnation from the IIHF, which has threatened to impose sanctions against the Russian ice hockey team, and hockey personalities such as Don Cherry.

IIHF president Rene Fasel released in a statement that some sort of punishment will be handed down.

In 29 years of world championships, this is the first time he has seen something like this.

The Russian hockey star Alexander Ovechkin, who plays for the Washington Capitals, was among a few players to linger after his team left the ice. This wasn't lost on Duchene, who appreciated what he did despite the departure of most of the team.

"What Ovechkin did was classy. You could tell he didn't want to leave out of respect for us. That's something I will bring up to him and thank him for next time I see him," he said.

It's been reported that the other Russians who stayed on the ice were Pittsburgh Penguins forward Evgeni Malkin, Florida Panthers defenceman Dmitry Kulikov and former NHLer Viktor Tikhonov.

Being classy isn't anything new for Duchene, who has always demonstrated tremendous generosity to his fans and his hometown.

He plans to attend the Haliburton Highlands Health Services Foundation fundraiser event named after him, the Matt Duchene Charity Golf Classic, on July 23 at the Pinestone Resort and Conference Centre.

Duchene might only be 24 yearsold, but he's already played six NHL seasons for his boyhood idolized team, the Colorado Avalanche and recently won an Olympic gold medal with the Canadian men's team last year. It's difficult even for the down-to-earth Duchene to not appreciate the amazing journey his career has taken.

"After this one, I found myself a bit in disbelief especially since the Olympics were barely over a year ago. Obviously the Olympics and world championships are the two biggest international tournaments and to have won gold at both of them at such a young age and within just over a year of each other, it's pretty amazing. Now, like you said, all I need is a Stanley Cup and I will be part of that Triple Gold Club, which before winning this tourney, I never even really thought about. Now though, it makes me want to win that Cup even more than before. I'm very excited," he said.

Update: OSGA 55+ event coming to the Haliburton Highlands

As we prepare for the upcoming Ontario Senior Games Association (OSGA) 55+ regional games to be held in Midland this Aug. 26 there are numerous activities taking place in the county through to the end of July. Events from bid euchre to pickleball and shuffleboard are being held at over 10 different venues.

One of the more senior participants, Bruce Armstrong, is registered in a few events at the great age of 94 years young. Bruce has been in the games before they were the OSGA 55+ Games.

The modest registration fee of $15 allows an individual to participate in as many events as he or she would like. All events, locations, and dates are outlined on the OSGA website under District 11. Further information and registration particulars may also be obtained by contacting Doug McIntosh at 705-489-3850.

Remember: it is the participation, not the competition, that counts.

Penny Raffle planning begins

community news

wilberforce

Hilda Clark
448-2018

The old rec committee will meet this week to review recent events that include a successful Maple Fest and to continue with organizing this year's Penny Raffle. That fun event will be staged on Saturday, July 18 at the arena.

It is hoped that again many generous people will donate some exciting interesting prizes. The committee also has an interesting raffle on the go. The prize is a basket full of over $200 worth of $20 gift certificates for use at local businesses. Draw is July 1. Committee members have tickets for sale. Funds raised by these endeavours will go toward new flooring at the arena.

A special exhibit entitled Aprons will open at our museum the Wilberforce Red Cross Outpost Historic House on Monday, June 22. It will be there until Civic Holiday weekend. The exhibit will feature a display of aprons that were worn in this area during the years the

This look at the history of aprons will include some earlier ones. Any one got a carpenter's apron from an existing or former business? The Guild would be pleased to learn of and include other interesting ones in the display. Call me.

Some interesting, even surprising, facts are being uncovered about these pieces of apparel.

The AGM of District 18 of Retired Teachers of Ontario was held at Fleming College, Haliburton campus on May 18. Chaired by president Wayne Cooper, the regular AGM business was conducted along with reports made about members' services, communication, health services, etc. Guest speaker was OPP Sgt. Sean Hawley who led a discussion on Driving For Seniors. Attendees also enjoyed lunch and a social time.

Though it was the Saturday after the holiday weekend there was a great number of vehicles surrounding the LWMC. As I entered town I wondered if I had missed hearing about an important community event. A sale? A wedding? A funeral? Turned out it was a gathering of residents from all those cottages/homes in Harcourt Park. Though many make their permanent homes on the lakes there a lot of seasonal residents must be back. Hope it was a good meeting.

Congratulations to Kayla and Joe Sisson on the birth of their daughter May 18. Addilyn Mae was proudly shown off by the happy parents to the equally happy grandparents, Kevin and Bev Sisson as well as to grandmother Ann Mawbey and to some delighted Chumbley relatives.

Congratulations to Megan and Logan Roberts on the birth of their daughter on May 23, and to grandparents, Pam and Rod Roberts as well as to Pam's parents, Les and Ruth Schell, and Rod's mother, Irene McGuire.

Once again I must confess to an error: Nancy Brink did not enter Highland Wood, but is settled happily back home on the Eagle Lake Road.

A successful craft, bake sale and barbecue was held on the lawn of Maple Lake United Church on May 23. Merrie Barry, Betty Berry, Allan and Beverly Upton, Judy and Albert Carpenter and Amy. Ray Campbell as well as various pie-bakers, such as Shirley Johnston and K. Owens

640 IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of a dear husband Merle Clarke who passed away May 27th, 2011.

"A million times I've needed you,
A million times I've cried.
If love could have saved you dear,
You never would have died.
Things we feel most deeply,
Are the hardest things to say,
My dearest...I loved you,
In a very special way.
If I could have one lifetime wish,
One dream that could come true,
I'd pray to God with all my heart,
For yesterday and you."

Lovingly remembered and sadly missed.
